

Abstract:

Network biology of complex traits and diseases based on transcriptomics with some examples from animals will be covered, followed by methods of linking SNPchip-based DNA variations to microarray or RNAseq based transcriptomic profiles of individuals and its implications in causality modeling and accurate genomic predictions for complex traits will be outlined. The talk will end with an overview of ongoing 'quantitative and systems genetics' projects.